This nifty little book introduces an impressive gathering of experienced practitioners, who condensed their expertise into 3-5 pages of wisdom, inspiration and questions that aim to remind us why we do what we do, as educators, mentors, leaders.

The publication is packed full of theory-informed practical tips and strategies on a broad range of subjects, from encouraging critical thinking and curiosity to creating inclusive learning environment and using technology in the classroom.

While many examples refer to school classrooms, the proposed food for thought and best practice is very relevant to the issues we face in higher education today. My personal favourite is Prof. Robert Bjork’s ‘creating desirable difficulties to enhance learning’.
